Making Cookies

by Sara Matson

"I'm making chocolate chip cookies," said Libby's brother Max.

"Can I help?" Libby asked.

"You're too little," said Max.

Libby stood on a chair to watch Max. He mixed sugar and butter. He added eggs and salt. He stirred in three cups of flour. Then he spooned batter onto the pan.

"Stop!" Libby said. "You forgot something."

Max checked. "I put in sugar and butter. I put in eggs, salt, and flour. What did I forget?"

Libby ran to the cupboard for a jar. "You forgot the chocolate chips."

"You are right," Max said. "Thank you, Libby."

Libby smiled. "See? I'm not too little to help!"
